Who are we?

Milk Honey Bees is a Black girl-led creative and expressive safe space for Black Girls to put H.E.R (Healing Empowerment and Resilience) first. Through mentoring, creative programmes, research, wellbeing support and leadership opportunities, we work alongside Black girls to shape policy, community and culture. We work in schools and the community ensuring everything we do is adaptable and not prescriptive.

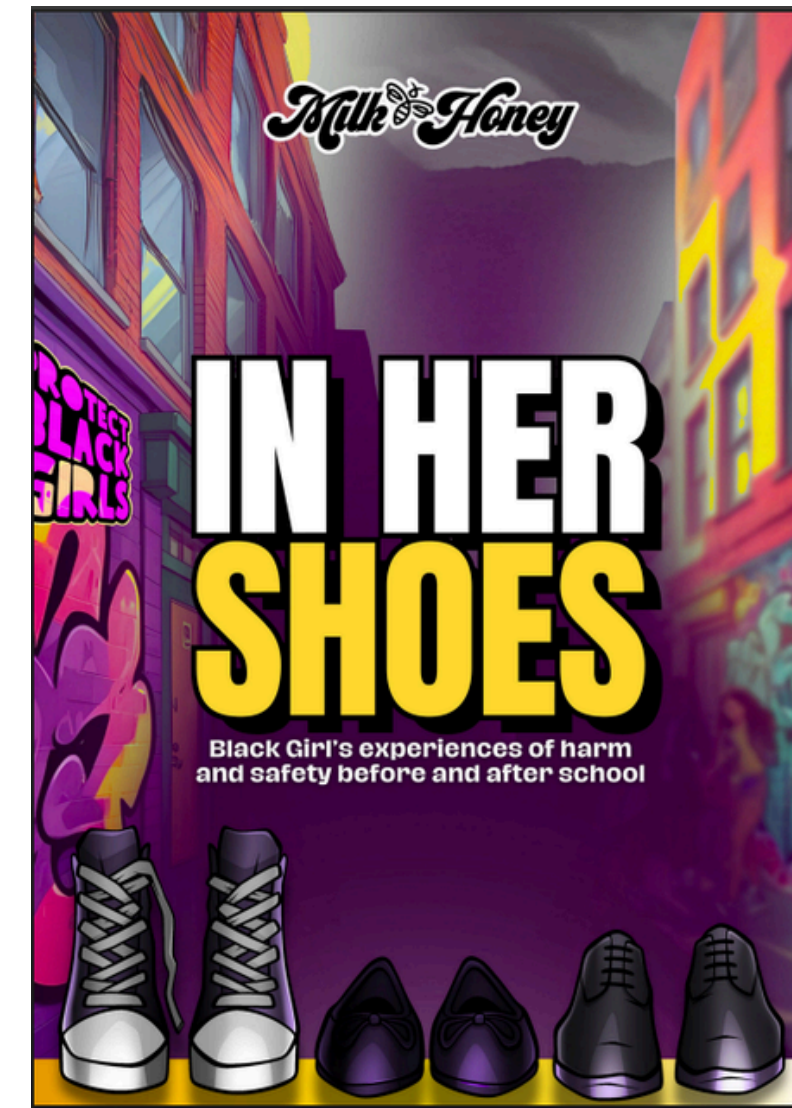

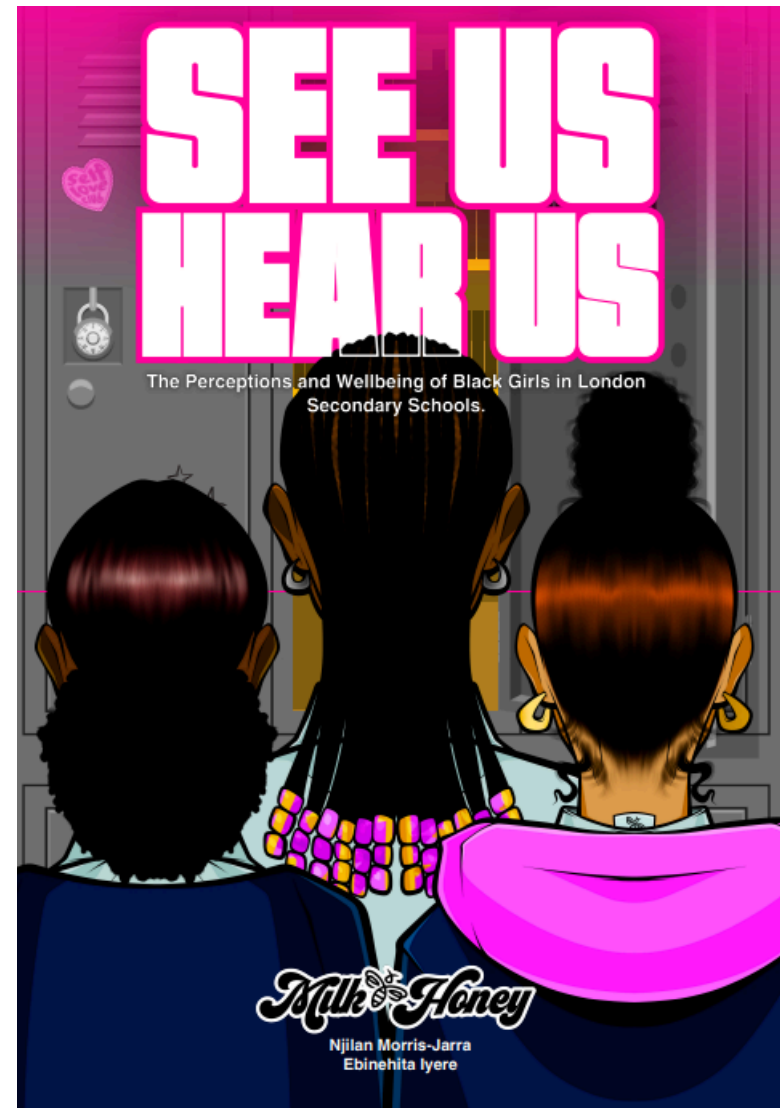

Our work focuses on:

- Wellbeing & Liberation
- Education & Research
- Creativity & Innovation
- Agency & Power

Our Research

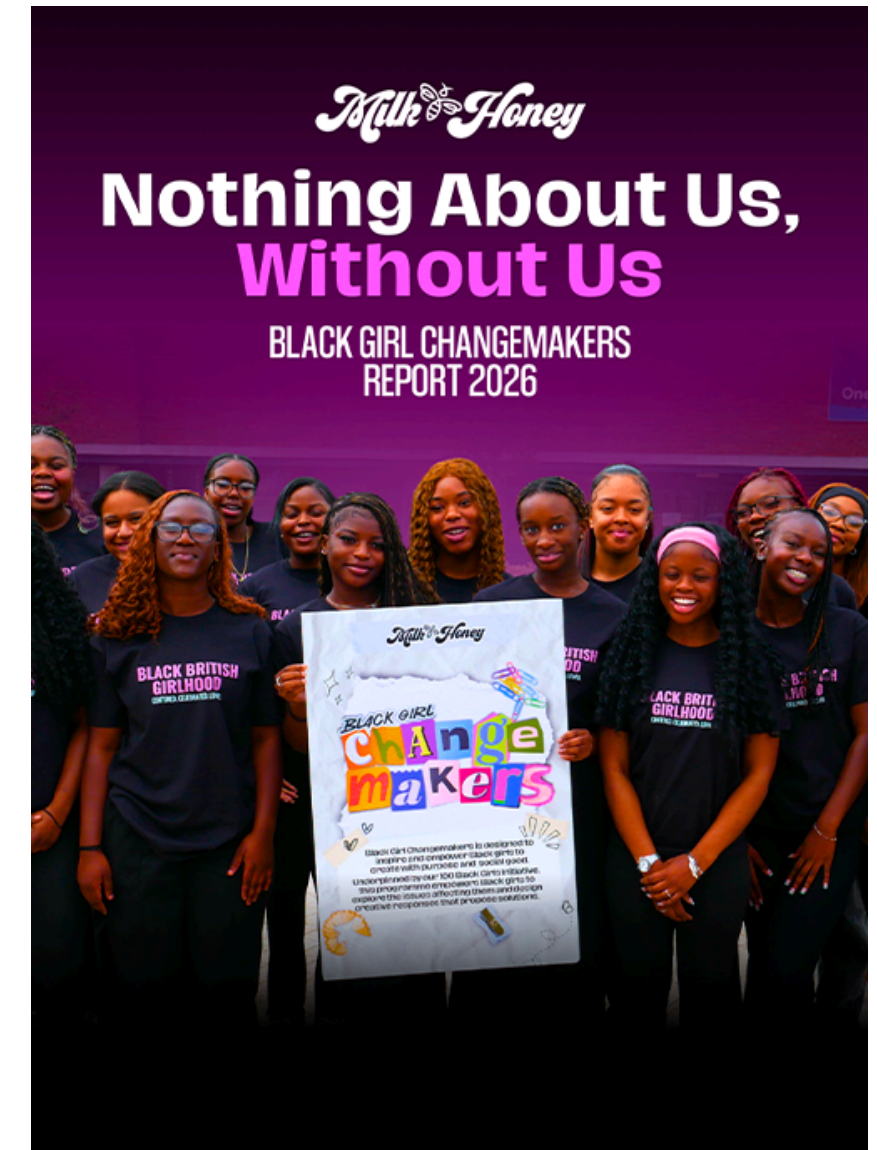

Here are examples of research that has made a real impact and why your voice in research matters:

Black Girl Change Makers

Black Girl Change Makers is a research and leadership programme rooted in Black Girlhood, the creating space for Black girls to explore the issues that matter most to them through research, reflection and creative inquiry.

The programme recognises Black girls as knowledge creators, not simply subjects of research. Together, they contribute to a growing body of Black girl-led knowledge that can influence policy, practice, culture and community. By the end of Black Girl Change Makers researchers will have contributed to published research, developed leadership and research skills, and joined a growing network of Black girl change makers shaping conversations about the future.

Creativity Creates Change

Black girls are already creating, leading and innovating every day.

Black Girl Changemakers combines creativity, research and leadership to help young people explore issues that matter to them, share their perspectives and influence change.

Because creativity is not just about making things.

It's about imagining better futures and having the confidence to help build them.

Research. Creativity. Leadership. Change.
